Around the City.

And now the fun begins.
The Littlehouse crossed to sea yesterday.
The A. B. Field starts for Tillamook this morning.
Rev. J. V. Milligan will officiate in East Portland today.
J. W. Walsh, editor of the Chelalis Valley Advertiser is in the city.
The German Reformed congregation will not hold their usual service today.
"My Neighbor's Conscience" is the subject of the lecture to-night by B. S. MacLafferty.
Services as usual at the Y. M. C. A. hall at 2:45 this afternoon. Cordial invitation extended to all.
E. C. Holden advertises to-day an auction sale on Thursday next, of eleven lots all located in Alsea's Astoria.
Divine service on board the ship Killochan lying at Flavel's dock at 2 p. m. Rev. J. McCormac officiating.
The Oregon had not shown up at dark yesterday, but will probably get away today. The Columbia is due to-morrow.
Frank Johnson shot, and it is supposed fatally wounded May Williams in a Portland cigar factory last Friday evening.
T. A. Orelli publishes a card this morning announcing that he is a candidate for councilman from the second ward.

Rev. R. J. Laughlin, pastor of the church at Albina, will preach in the Presbyterian church here to-day-morning and evening.

London-colored clouds overspread the sky yesterday, and the barometer which had been up to 30.41 on Friday night, fell several points.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Seaside Packing Company will be held at the office of F. J. Taylor at 2 o'clock to-morrow afternoon.

Carl Adler's new clock was put into position yesterday afternoon. It is a public convenience and reflects credit upon that enterprising merchant.

Zambloch closed a very successful engagement at Occidental hall last evening. Jos. Grimmer's troupe will probably give one or two performances this week.

The present buoy will be removed from Sand Island channel this week and a new buoy put in its place. It is doubtful if that channel will be much used hereafter.

It will take about 600 piles for the foundation of the Clatsop Mill Company's new building. Gill & Clinton have about 200 in place, and are driving the remainder at the rate of 25 a day.

The British bark Scottish Bard, 816, Hamilton, master, arrived in yesterday, 79 days from Brisbane. The Geo. S. Hower, Killochan and Spirit of the Bore are about loaded, and will probably clear to-morrow.

Attention is directed to the advertisement of the Foster. Plentix-like he has risen from the ashes of last July's conflagration, and invites his friends and the public generally to call and look through his spacious establishment.

It is proposed to have an entertainment given under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A., next Thursday afternoon, and for that purpose the ladies of that society will meet at the Y. M. C. A. hall at three o'clock to-morrow night to complete the necessary arrangements.

An upper Astoria resident, formerly connected with the Fishermen's Packing Company, is reported in Honolulu. He went to San Francisco some time ago, and an alleged discrepancy in his accounts has caused suit to be entered against him by the company.

A large crowd gathered on the corner of Main and Commercial streets yesterday afternoon to listen to unparliamentary language on the part of two gentlemen who refused to quit quarreling and go to fighting. Recalcitrant knock-down arguments will not begin till to-morrow or Tuesday.

Y. M. C. A.—The members of the Y. M. C. A. have this week made marked improvement in the association room. The hall has been newly papered and painted and presents a much more comfortable and home-like appearance, and the stairway has been kinked and painted. This week the door will be kept open, and new furniture added; chess and checker tables will also be introduced, making the room an attractive resort in which our young men can spend their evenings.

NOT WRECKED BUT BADLY DAMAGED.—Captain Olson, master of the coasting schooner Albia, supposed to have been wrecked, writes from Tillamook, under date of the 5th inst. to White, Goldsmith & Co., that after a terribly stormy voyage of twelve days he crossed into Tillamook bay on Wednesday, the date of the letter. The evening after she crossed out from Astoria, she was struck by a storm which swept her decks clean, carrying away the water tanks and most of the supplies. For ten days the crew were almost without water, having to depend on what little was caught during the slight rainfalls. The cargo is badly damaged, though how badly he was not able to estimate, and could not tell the vessel was discharged. The insurance, he says, will probably cover the losses in full. Oregonian, 5.

A. F. D.—There will be a special meeting of the Board of Delegates of Astoria Fire Department at 7:30 o'clock.

"JEFF."—Ahead, and you miss a good meal when you forget it.

LAST EVENING'S MEETING.

Hume and Cleveland Nominated.

Somewhat before the time set for the meeting last evening, the court-room was pretty well filled. The meeting was organized by the election of J. G. Hunter as president, and J. F. Halloran, secretary. The president stated the object of the meeting to be the nomination of a mayor, and of a councilman from the first ward, and that nominations were in order. Martin Dillon asked for information as to the right of one of the second ward to vote in that meeting. The president decided that they had no right, it being a ward meeting.

A. F. Johns placed the name of D. Morgan, Jr., in nomination. B. S. Worsley placed the name of J. W. Hume in nomination. A. M. Trough placed the name of I. Bergman in nomination. Mr. Bergman declined. It was carried that nominations close, and that the vote be by ballot. C. W. Fulton and B. S. Worsley were appointed tellers. The vote resulted as follows: J. W. Hume, 55; D. Morgan, Jr., 46; scattering, 3. J. W. Hume was declared the nominee of the meeting for mayor.

Nominations for councilman for the first ward being in order, B. S. Worsley nominated A. A. Cleveland; A. F. Johns nominated I. Bergman; Mr. Bergman declined the nomination, and moved that the nomination of Mr. Cleveland be made unanimous, and the secretary was instructed to cast the vote of the meeting for Mr. Cleveland, which was done. The meeting then adjourned.

ANOTHER MEETING.

Morgan and Bergman Nominated.

Shortly after the meeting at the court house last evening, a party of gentlemen, among whom were O. Seavey, A. F. Johns, W. J. Barry, R. R. Spedden and others, came to the editorial office of The Astorian and stated that they had come to hold a meeting for the purpose of placing in nomination candidates for the offices of mayor and councilman from the first ward.

The office was placed at their disposal. D. Morgan, Jr. was nominated for mayor, and I. Bergman for councilman from the first ward, and the meeting adjourned.

Another Meeting.

At a meeting of citizens of the second ward held in Johnson's building last evening Aug. Danielson presided; J. M. Olsen, secretary. W. Hume was unanimously nominated for mayor, and T. A. Orelli as councilman from the second ward. The meeting then adjourned.

An Anonymous Correspondent.

At all times the anonymous correspondent is a somewhat pervasive individual, and it is in the political campaign that he flourishes like a green bay tree.

Never, by any chance, does the anonymous correspondent get anything published. No reputable newspaper ever pays any attention to his communications, except to waste-basket them and put them in the way of appropriation to some useful purpose after the paper makers have purified them. Very rarely are they ever read. The glance that shows them anonymous usually seals their fate. Yet, these writers continue to write, and in the hope, apparently, that on some lucky occasion they will get into print.

Do they ever read the papers, we wonder of these anonymous ones? If they do, they must have learned long since that the newspaper has absolutely no use for their communications; that it does not want them even when they contain what would be valuable if authentic, and that it wants them still less when they contain attacks on individuals, who are not its enemies or not. And they never think what it is they ask a newspaper to do when they invite it to publish an anonymous attack upon a public man or private citizen. Do they realize how cowardly their position is?

There are times when the value or usefulness of a communication in the press is enhanced by its appearing unsigned, and the newspaper is very rarely unwilling to respect the incognito of a correspondent. But even when the correspondent is not named, he has no right to ask a newspaper to become responsible for statements which he himself is unwilling to stand sponsor. Still less has he the right to expect that the newspaper will carry his communications to the extent of withholding his name from the newspaper publications.

American and English Ships.

The trade that commerce brings a suitable port is every year adding to the amount of money spent at Astoria and will increase with the growth of the Columbia river exports. The supplying of ships with provisions, the amount of money expended along the docks in the receipt and discharge of cargoes, and the other industries that Astoria will sustain. The difference in the English and American system of disbursing, paying crews, etc., is noticeable. An American vessel arriving in the Columbia pays its crew and makes all settlement for the voyage upon arrival; each American ship averages about $3,000 in matter of Astoria disbursements. An English vessel makes its settlement with the crew upon arrival in Liverpool.

DEEP AND GRAY'S RIVERS NOTES.

From an Occasional Reporter.

EDITOR ASTORIAN:

With a considerable frontage to the magnificent Columbia river, this frontage pierced by such well defined rivers as the Deep and Gray's—available by the deepest draught ships; its surface covered with good timber; its rich loined with economic and valuable minerals; with sufficient agricultural lands, when cleared, to feed over a million of inhabitants; and pastoral lands upon which can be raised the choicest grade of horses, sheep, and cattle; with its waters abounding in the finest fish from the imperial salmon to the lowly sturgeon; with a climate unsurpassed for mildness and salubrity; with water power sufficient to drive the machinery of the world—such is Wahkiakum, the smallest, nicest, richest, best, most cosmopolitan county (as far as its present inhabitants are concerned) in the whole extent of Washington Territory.

Between Stark's Point and Harrison's Point are the mouths of Gray's river, the most direct one from one another. The physical appearance of Gray's bay is very peculiar. I feel convinced that the whole bay was formerly the bed of some old crater. The bay may be said to resemble a horse shoe in appearance. Looking at it from Harrison's Point the view is grandly beautiful. The water in Deep river is of wonderful depth, as opposite Olsen's I am told it is 62 fathoms deep, while in front of Colonel Shaw's beautifully located residence it is some twelve fathoms deep in the middle of the stream. The tide lands are, generally speaking, covered with evergreens, and when properly ditched will be the most valuable lands in the world. Their fertility may be said to be inexhaustible and these lands will never be worn out or require manure like the Willamette valley lands and other lands. Deer and bear are to be found here; large numbers of grouse and pheasants, and muskrat and beaver. The waterfowl, mallard ducks are to be seen quite feeding on the flats within gunshot range of the tourist's gun. These rivers also abound with the most delicious trout. To the lover of nature's charms, and to those in search of health and pleasure, I would say, there are few more attractive places than along these rivers. One seldom affords one of such peculiar scenery, even in a lifetime of constant travel. However, to be appreciated one must not rush right through on the general Captain Raphael's boat. Take time, spend a month prospecting about; take a few Russian vapor baths which he can have gratis—at nearly every place; and you will have a most enjoyable trip. The water is so pure and sweet, and the scenery so beautiful, that you will have cause to bless the writer of these few lines.

Wasting Affection on a Box.

KNAPPA, ORE., Dec. 6, 1918.
EDITOR ASTORIAN:
When Peggy's arms her dog imprison
Always with a look of love
How often would I stand and turn
To get a pat from a hand like hers;
And when she kisses Towser's nose
Oh, don't I wish that I were those!

I see his last ap endage drag
And wish I had a tail to wag.
Why don't you kiss him for that
A dog can't ever appreciate
But I will never own to her
My jealousy of an ugly cur.

Ab, Peggy! Is it really true
That you do just as others do?
You hug and pat that dog of yours.
Yet wish you were not of his kind?
According to a better plan,
Into a real good-looking man.

And while I'm getting on so swimmin'
I like to know if you young women
Hug close your dog and hug again
Just cause you ain't got nary man?
If so you girls are sort of o'mind
To hug a dog, when any fellow
Would gladly get down on his knees
Just for the tiniest little squeeze.

I'll bet a coon I'll not be misse
When you are in the mind for kissin'
So, Peggy, it is wrong to waste
Your hug on a dog, and I've been told
A man can hug you back; he's stronger
Don't practice on your dog no longer.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF LOVE.

They Will Marry at New Year's.

"Is this where they edit?"
"Yes, ma'am," said the man who reports conventions and mass meetings where they nominate mayor and councilmen by acclamation and otherwise, as he looked up and discovered a trimly-built young lady standing in the doorway. "This is the exact spot where Right, envied on every side by Intellect, deals telling blows against Wrong and Injustice, clad though they be in the garments of Might and Oppression. Armed with the lance of Thought that glister brightly in the sunlight of Reason, the editor stands ever ready, a helmeted knight in the holy cause of Justice, fully pauperized, and with weapon in constant poise."

"That wasn't exactly what I wanted to find out about," said the young lady. "I am going to make a crazy-quilt, and mamma said that an editor could probably tell me all about it"—and a benevolent smile illuminated the features of the fair visitor.

"Our insane bed-clothes editor," said the political reporter, "is not here at present, and the rest of us naturally feel somewhat diffident about intruding upon the domain of quilts which are regarded by the literary abstraction of mind and pillow-talkers concerning whose mental condition there is doubt."

"I hardly think you understand me, sir," said the young lady. "A crazy-quilt isn't really and truly crazy, you know—it is really called so because, being made of silk of different colors, it presents an entire appearance."

"Presents a what?"
"An entire appearance—looks rather strange, you know."

"Oh, yes, sort of dizzy looking, you mean."

"That probably expresses the idea, sir, although not perhaps in the most choice language. I should have said, however, if you could give me some information about this matter, because it is necessary that I should begin the work at once."

Making this demured quip for yourself?"
"No, sir—that is, not exactly," said a vivid blush suffused the young lady's features. "But I want to have it done by the 1st of January, because we won't have any room for the frame in the other house."

"Which other house?"
"Why, the one I—that is, we—oh, I think you're awful," and more blushes ensued.

"The 1st of January is not generally considered the most auspicious season of the year for moving," said the political reporter. "The blithe carol of the New Year's merriment, and the low of the man who is buying time and hiring knitters for next season, are about the only features of prominence connected with domestic life in Astoria at that season of the year. Why don't you wait until May—joyous, happy May—when the Columbia sparkles to the sea and its smooth surface is dotted with white-sailed schooners, catching the festive Chinook salmon?"

"That's just what I have said all along," replied the young lady; but Charles said that he would like to have the same house with mamma, and—now I shan't say another word," and more blushing ensued.

"You're going to be married, are you?"
"Yes, sir. That is, Charles said—"

"I know what he said. He leaned you undoubtedly against his suspender, and, speaking in low, tremulous tones, asked you if you felt that you could leave parents, brothers, sisters, cousins on Sunday, and all that makes home at once the altar of our affections and the joy of our lives, and live forever more with him. And you yanked him out of the realm of dream so quick that it made his head swim. Isn't that it?"

"Why, yes, sir—that is, I said—"

"Certainly. You said that when a girl, standing at the threshold of womanhood, and watching with wistful eyes for the mist of futurity to lift, sees advancing the one man to whom she can give her heart, all her doubts and fears disappear as if by magic, and she knows that only a great happiness and holy content enshroud her being. Charles then kissed you warmly about an inch below your nose, and broke himself next day buying an engagement ring. He calls at the house every night now, and when he says to you: 'Myrtle, do you love me as much as this evening?' you look at him and say: 'He doesn't call me Myrtle at all.'"

"He doesn't call me Myrtle at all," interrupted the young lady. "My name is—"

"It's the same thing. A rose by any name would have as many thorns. When he asks you if you love him as much as you did last Thursday, you climb a little higher on his neck and want to know how he can ever doubt you. It's all right, though. Be a true and loving wife, and all that makes home at once the altar of our affections and the joy of our lives, and live forever more with him. And you yanked him out of the realm of dream so quick that it made his head swim. Isn't that it?"

"Why not, sir?"
"Because," was the reply, "it would recall to him the happy past."

CHOPPING LUMBER IN MAINE.

Something Like the Columbia Except the Snow.

The chopper works upon one bended knee. Before beginning to cut, he has looked to see which way the tree is inclined. For this he steps back a short distance to where he can see to the very top. If he is in doubt he lifts his ax by the end of the helve and lets it hang freely suspended. This gives him a plumb line by which he measures the inclination of the tree. But it is not enough to determine in what direction the tree will fall most readily. It may be that large trees are standing right in the way of its falling on that side, and against those the tree will be lodged. It must be carried to the one side or the other, and herein consists one of the mysteries of woodcraft—the skill to guide a tree in its fall. He will direct it with the greatest ease. Having decided where he wants it to go to avoid the risk of lodging against other trees, or of being broken by falling on uneven ground, or to have it lie so that the logs will be convenient of removal, the chopper first undercuts the tree; that is, he cuts upon one side to lower which he will have it fall, and in such a manner that the line of the kerf shall be exactly at right angles with the line along which the tree is to fall. If the chopper stands on a perpendicular, and has no inclination to fall as he wishes, the chopper cuts a little beyond the heart on that side. By doing this he removes the base when the tree is ready to fall and rests upon a base of but an inch or two in breadth, so much from the center of the stump. The effect of this is to prevent its moving the base so that the center of gravity will fall on the side desired. Though he works in so cramped a posture, the chopper cuts the stump in two and so much he thinks his little boy could spin his top upon it.

Having undercut the tree with the greatest care, the woodman now changes his position a little, but remains on the same side, rests on his other knee, and shifts hands, that is, he shifts the ax with the other hand forward. He now cuts upon the other side, leaving the stump two or three inches higher according as he wishes to gain advantage for the last few strokes. The work goes on with little concern until the base is no thicker than a plank and quite as even, then a blow is aimed full at the center, and the chopper looks quickly at the top to note the effect. If he perceives a tremor in the trunk, or if a shiver of bark or moss loosened from its hold, he knows now every stroke will tell, and he aims these with the greatest precision. Soon as ever the top begins to fall he marks the direction in which it is moving. If he wishes to bring it more toward him, he strikes a blow upon the further edge; if to carry it further from him, the blow is given upon the side that is nearer. These last strokes need to be given with great nicety. If feeble, they will fail to effect their purpose; if of too great force, the tree will be severed from the stump upon that side, and then all control of it is lost at once, and it plunges blindly forward. A fall tree like the pine is broken from the stump by a force acting quite differently from that which is applied in the case of shorter trees. In its descent the tree does not cut to the earth the trunk, and the butt strike at the same time, and the tree lies half buried in the snow.

The Cleveland, Ohio, congressman, have the honor, M. A. Moran, says: "I have used St. Jacob's Oil in my family, and have always found it safe and reliable. I have been suffering for some time with a lame knee, and St. Jacob's Oil affords me great relief."
